CAN'T LOCATE GIBBONS

New York City, Feb. 10.—Efforts were made today to reach Floyd Gibbons, International News Service staff correspondent at Shanghai war zone, who is somewhere out beyond the lines of communication, in quest of news.

The following message was dispatched to Dixon Hoft, staff correspondent in Shanghai by Newton C. Parke, International News Service director of foreign service:

"Any word from Gibbons? We are waiting for his latest.—Parke." And here was the answer:

"Gibbons out in field somewhere—Hoft."

FLIES OVER BATTLE LINES

(John Goette, I. N. S. war correspondent, the first newspaper man of any nation permitted to fly over the battle lines, flew back to Shanghai from Nanking today.)

By JOHN GOETTE
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

Shanghai, Feb. 10.—Our Keystone Yacht made the flight from Nanking to Shanghai (about 160 miles) in 1 hour and 38 minutes today, a record for large amphibians in the Far East.

The weather was clear but fate intervened, as it did yesterday.

Though the Chapei district at Shanghai was in clear sight, no fighting occurred when we passed over that section before and not a single Japanese plane was in sight. The fires I observed yesterday in flying to Nanking had been completely extinguished.

It was several hours after I landed before fighting resumed in the Chapei district. I saw Chinese defenders of the Arsenal there entrenching behind mounds of earth along the river banks. This was the result of an explosion yesterday which American mechanics and pilots witnessed while it worked.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 10.—(5:34 P. M.)—Sharply at five o'clock tonight the heaviest guns of the Japanese forces boomed out what was believed to be the beginning of an extensive final attempt to drive Chinese troops out of the Shanghai area.

The heavy guns furiously shelled the Chinese positions in the northern section of the Chapei area, and simultaneously a continuous machine-gun fire broke out along most of the 16-mile front from Shanghai to Paoshan.

The attack came suddenly but not unexpectedly following a day and night of comparative quiet.

Japanese officials had announced they were about to launch an offensive which would not be left down until the Chinese were driven at least 20 miles from Shanghai.

While guns fired only occasionally through the early part of the day, heavy reinforcements of bluejackets and marines were believed to have been landed along the Whangpoo banks.

TOKYO, Feb. 10.—(INS)—Twenty-six Cantonese airplanes were enroute to Nanking today to use the city as a base for a concerted Chinese air attack upon the Japanese in Shanghai, according to Shanghai dispatches to Tokyo newspapers today.

The dispatches stated the planes were under the command of General Chang Ching Chang.

SIDELIGHTS ON MANCHURIAN WAR INCIDENTS

MUKDEN, Feb. 10.—(INS)—Thousands of Japanese have killed thousands of Chinese and thousands of Chinese have killed thousands of Japanese since September 18th and there is much racial hatred everywhere. However, through it all live a few examples of close personal friendship between Chinese and Japanese individuals.

Outstanding perhaps among all others is that of a Japanese official, whose name naturally cannot be divulged. Early on the morning of September 19th when his fellow countrymen were capturing Mukden with machine gun and bayonet, this Japanese went to a high Chinese official and promised to rescue one thing from Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's home, and asked that the choice be made.

The Chinese official, after much thought, selected the Young Marshal's priceless collection of Chinese paintings for rescue. The Japanese official secretly made his way to the palace and secured the bundle of rolled paintings which he handed over to the Chinese. That was the one group of treasures saved to Marshal Chang. His other property was claimed to have been boxed up subsequently by the Japanese army and shipped to the port of Tientsin. Under the circumstances, the Marshal refused to take custody and he has never seen his treasures again.

The moral of the bitter end of the man who lets his own country down could not be better illustrated than in the experiences of a leading Chinese businessman at Mukden. This merchant wanted to curry favor with the Japanese and got himself elected chairman of the Chinese chamber of commerce in the Japanese settlement. Then he had the inspiration of concocting a bastard flag by sewing a Japanese flag to the top of a Chinese one.

When Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang heard of this he was incensed, but bided his time. Eventually he thought out a plan. He let it be known that he was selling a piece of property cheaply. The offending merchant came to inquire about it. He was at once clamped into jail and after a few days was escorted back to the Japanese concession in an open police patrol wagon much to his disgrace.

However, the pro-Japanese activities continued until several weeks after the Japanese occupation when the invaders grew tired of the Chinese who was so willing to sell out his own nation, and then they found a pretext to put him under arrest. They were more severe, though, and held him instead of sending him back in disgrace as the Marshal had done.

The carrier pigeon carries on. Thus say the Japanese military who have been struggling to keep open long lines of communications in a frozen Manchuria where the temperature has stood thirty to forty degrees below zero for months.

One case was described where a small Japanese force was surrounded and outnumbered thirty times. The soldiers would have been annihilated but for the fact that a carrier pigeon managed to reach the base, carrying news of the plight, and thereby bringing about the dispatch of reinforcements.

Another pigeon flew a distance of fifty miles carrying an important message. In the course of its flight it was attacked by a Chinese eagle but managed to come in, though wounded. It died shortly after reaching the Japanese military train but reinforcements were sent and the beleaguered force relieved.

According to headquarters, the Japanese army adopted the carrier pigeon service from the French during the World War. Several French military instructors were employed for

FAR REACHING TAX PROGRAM EXPECTED

Expected to Reach Into Every Pocketbook, Directly or Indirectly

MUST BALANCE BUDGET

By William S. Neal

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(INS)—A Federal taxation program more far reaching than any yet proposed to Congress may emerge from the House Ways and Means Committee as the result of disclosures made in new treasury estimates.

The program admittedly will reach into every pocketbook, directly or indirectly, if Congressional leaders carry out their promise to balance the budget.

Enactment of a general manufacturers' sales tax, with exemptions for food, clothing and similar necessities, was being considered by the Ways and Means committee as the only means of raising needed revenue without hampering industrial recovery.

Warned by treasury experts that $1,240,000,000 must be raised in new taxes—$321,000,000 more than estimated in December—leaders of the Ways and Means Committee said they would go the limit to balance the budget.

ARREST TRIO ACCUSED OF STEALING CHICKENS

Twelve of the Stolen Chickens
Are Recovered Hidden
In A Woods

ONE MAKES CONFESSION

Charged with stealing chickens from people living in Warminster township, William McConnell, nineteen, John W. Hinkle, 46, and John Hinkle, Jr., 17, of Warminster, are today in the Bucks County Prison awaiting hearings before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack, at Doylestown.

The arrests were made yesterday by Private Peter Reilly, of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police, and Constable Weiss, of Warminster. Sergeant Reese Davis, of the Doylestown sub-station and Private Reilly last night recovered twelve of the stolen chickens that had been hidden in a woods near Bethayres.

The chickens were stolen from the farm of the Misses Louise and Elizabeth Yerkes, located near the homes of the three men arrested.

McConnell, who is married, gave the State Police a signed statement yesterday. Hinkle and his son will be questioned today.

McConnell told State Police that he went to the John Hinkle place on Sunday night, February 4, to play cards. After Mrs. Hinkle had gone to bed, McConnell said that Hinkle then talked to him about stealing chickens from the Misses Yerkes place nearby.

"Hinkle said, 'You and Bud Hinkle go over and get some chickens at Yerkes' and I will take them down to the city and sell them,'" McConnell told police.

"Bud and I then went over and I opened the chicken house and went in

BUCKS COUNTY JAIL RANKS 13TH IN STATE

Given Rating of 612 Among Various Jails Throughout
The Entire State

ONLY 2 IN 800 CLASS

The Bucks County prison ranks 13th in the list of penal institutions of Pennsylvania for 1931, according to the valuation ratings made by the bureau of restoration, Department of Welfare. The figures for the county prisons in the State were released today by Mrs. I. Albert Liveright, Secretary of Welfare, after the bureau had compiled its findings for the past year. Bucks County has a rating of 612.

The Allegheny Work House tops the list and the Philadelphia county prison was a close second. These two are the only ones which pass the 800 mark.

The valuation ratings are made on a possible 1000 points. Of this, 500 points are grouped for administration; 300 for buildings and grounds, and 200 for personnel. Penalties are given, 100 points if a prison is conducted on the fee system of feeding inmates, and this covers the entire seventh class group of county prisons; 50 points penalty if the sanitation is poor; 50 points penalty if both natural and artificial lighting is bad; 50 points penalty if both forced and natural ventilation is not good; 50

Trips to Nearby Washington Landmarks

By Edward W. Hocker

Because of the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, keen interest has been aroused in all manner of Washington landmarks. Southeastern Pennsylvania is fortunate in possessing so many of these landmarks, associated with the career of Washington in war and peace. Herewith is one of a series of twenty articles describing nearby places which are linked with the story of the Father of his country.

III.—Washington Crossing

Washington Crossing, Bucks County, where the state of Pennsylvania has established a public park, abounds in memories of the Father of his country, who here, at a time when dejection beset the American cause and the army was reduced to less than 5,000 effective men, nevertheless assumed the offensive and led his troops across the Delaware on Christmas night, achieving a victory at Trenton which brought new courage to the sorely tried Americans.

When the British pursued him and his men across New Jersey, Washington's forethought checked the pursuit at the Delaware, for he caused all boats to be collected and hidden on the Pennsylvania side seven miles above McConnell's ferry, now Washington Crossing. Shortly before Christmas these boats were brought down the river to the ferry, where the troops, as they arrived on Christmas night, boarded them to cross the stream.

The night was stormy, and after 11 o'clock snow fell. There was some floating ice in the river, but not to the extent suggested by the familiar picture of Washington crossing the Delaware. And of course Washington did not stand erect in the prow of his boat in an attitude likely to upset the craft. And furthermore, the flag, if there was one in Washington's boat, was not the stars and stripes, for that was not adopted until 1777.

However, there can be no question of the heroism of the exploit. Until 3 o'clock in the morning of the 26th the boats were engaged in carrying the Americans across the river. Then came the march to Trenton. In that town the Hessian auxiliaries of the British army, stationed there to keep watch on the Americans, had been celebrating Christmas according to the customs of their homeland. After having feasted and drunk to surfeit, they were sleeping the sleep that follows such carousals. Suddenly in the early morning of the 26th they were awakened by the onslaught of the Americans. Taken by surprise, they could offer little resistance. Soon they surrendered, their commander, Colonel Rahl, being mortally wounded.

Part of the house of Samuel McConnell, the ferryman at the time of the Revolution, is included in the inn at Washington Crossing. North of the inn the place where the troops embarked is marked by a monument which the Bucks County Historical Society erected before the state took the land for a park. In the vicinity is also a tall shaft which the Patriotic Order Sons of America reared in 1916.

The park extends several miles up the river. Along the road bordering the Delaware, at Pidcock's Creek, is the Thompson house, the oldest part of which was built in 1701. Here General Alexander, known as Lord Stirling, one of the American commanders, had his headquarters. James Monroe, then a lieutenant and later President of the United States, was with Lord Stirling in this house. Nearby are the graves of some soldiers who died at the time of the camp.

STATE SURVEYS COUNTY BRIDGES; POST 950 SPANS

Details of 2300 Former County
Bridges Have Been Studied

536 THE IN 4-TON CLASS

More Are Safe, However,
With Loads of Three Tons

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10.—(INS)—Engineers of the Pennsylvania Department of Highways have completed a detailed survey and study of approximately 2300 former county bridges on the State highway system and report 950 bridges are posted for load limitation, Secretary Sam S. Lewis announced today.

Under the Act of 1929, which transferred county bridges on the State highway system to the highway department, it was believed that 2,127 bridges would be taken over. The preceding administration made a survey to identify the bridges and classify them according to type.

The survey just completed was calculated to determine the load capacity of each bridge as a traffic safeguard. This resulted in the posting of 950 bridges for load limits. Of this number the engineers found 536 bridges with a capacity of only four tons or less, with a large percentage in the three-ton class.

Secretary Lewis said further study of the survey report is being made and plans developed for a progressive schedule of bridge improvement. Replacements have been under way since last year and the most urgent cases revealed by the new survey are under construction or scheduled.

Lewis warned against excessive expenditures in improving the bridges. He said:

"If we can prolong the life of a bridge by a reasonable expenditure for repairs and reinforcement, with absolute safety to the motoring public, I can see no reason for junking the bridge to make room for a concrete masterpiece."

THIRTY-THREE FATALITIES IN COUNTY LAST YEAR

785 Were Injured and There
Were 768 Non-Fatal
Accidents

SAYS MOTOR DEPT.

There were 33 fatalities, 785 injuries, 30 fatal accidents and 768 non-fatal accidents in Bucks County during 1931, according to the first report of motor vehicle accidents by counties to be prepared by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles of the Department of Revenue was made public today. It was compiled by John H. Glazier, compilation chief of the accident-reporting section of the bureau and covers 1931. It is based only on reports received by the bureau.

The continued co-operation of county coroners, local police and others in reporting fatal automobile accidents to the bureau is requested, Walter W. Matthews, chief of the safety division said, as these reports aid the bureau in making a study of accident causes. The law requires such reports from participants in accidents. Much can be done in reducing accidents, Matthews declared, if local authorities will make a study of the accident causes in their locality. The department, he said, is willing to co-operate and suggest remedial measures.

SEA SCOUTING HERE HAS GROWN RAPIDLY

Six Groups Organized in The County During Three Years

HOLD FIRST REGATTA

This is Boy Scout Anniversary Week and a member of the Sea Scout Ship, "Elks," Bristol, has written the following article for publication:

(By a Member of the S. S. S. "Elks")

Sea Scouting in Bucks County has grown rapidly in the last three years. The S. S. S. "Robert Morris," Morrisville, was organized in March, 1928; S. S. S. "Yankee Clipper," South Langhorne, in November, 1928; S. S. S. "Elks," Bristol, in June, 1930; S. S. S. "Rainbow Clipper," Crofton, July, 1931; S. S. S. "William Penn," Newtown, May, 1931; S. S. S. "Welcome," Doylestown, 1931.

The first Sea Scout regatta was held at Bristol on the Delaware River in 1930, and was won by the "Elks" ship, which had at that time only been organized four months. The first bridge of honor was held at Morrisville, in November, 1930, at which time awards were made. The second bridge of honor was held at Langhorne in May, 1931, and in November, 1931, the third one was held at Doylestown.

Training courses for Sea Scout leaders and Sea Scouts were held in Philadelphia in 1928-29-31. The Bucks County Council conducted a course in 1930.

With the commissioning of the "Elks" ship the Bucks County Council took national leadership in putting on an unique program, and also led the country by putting on the first bridge of honor. Sea Scout ships all over the country are now using the program that was started by the Bucks County Council. Incidentally this council is known throughout the United States and has gained national fame in Sea Scout work.

The Commodore of Bucks County Council is Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville; Edmond Cook, also of Morrisville, is the southern district commander. Bucks County Sea Scouts conducted a Sea Scout base on the Barnegat Bay in the summers of 1929 and 1930. Lack of funds made it necessary to forego that course last year.

It is the hope of S. S. S. "Elks" that this story will give the people in Bucks County a general idea of what Sea Scouting is, and the good it does the young men of today, both in building character and men.

PERSONAL FREEDOM THEME OF SPEAKER AT COMMENCEMENT

Dr. C. Duncan Spaeth, Princeton University, Speaks at Bristol High

34 ARE GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Prizes Presented by Mothers' and Fathers' Associations; Other Gifts

"No kind of freedom—personal or national—is going to endure unless it is the fruit of training, and no training is worth undergoing unless it results in freedom." Thus did Dr. C. Duncan Spaeth, of Princeton University, speak to the Bristol high school graduates last evening on the kind of freedom that comes from obedience to certain rules and training for emancipation from the petty things that enslave.

The auditorium of the high school was not large enough to hold the group of relatives and friends who gathered to witness the presentation of diplomas to the class of 34.

A practical application was made by the speaker, Dr. Spaeth, in driving home his thought on freedom for the individual. Referring to athletics, he remarked that "In training for the game you have to work tirelessly in order to get the freedom to do what you want. Then you will be able to help your team to win, and win moral victories as well." Continuing his discourse which was interspersed with humor, the Princeton professor told the graduates "I would rather be on a backward - looking, forward - moving crew of oarsmen, than on a forward-looking, backward-moving football team."

That all must learn to do the humble things before one can gain coveted freedom to press on in the bigger things of life was impressed on the assemblage. The emancipator of the slaves, Lincoln, was referred to. "Before Lincoln became a splitter of logical hairs he was a rail splitter. He had learned to focus something square and straight when he learned to split rails. His training was severe and he made it lead to something. We have had and do have many stump speakers. Lincoln was one but he made the stumps first before he practiced making stump speeches. He never 'watered' his words. There was something compressed in them. This came from his training, and his words, however few, always counted for something."

Other advice by Dr. Spaeth included "In proportion as you have availed yourself of your training . . . you are going to get into the minority, and the more skilled a person is the more elbow room he will have. The unskilled worker is the one who is suffering more today. If you can do some one thing better than anyone else, you will never be out of a job. Inspiration is necessary, but perspiration is more important."

Dr. Spaeth told those who have just completed their high school course to learn to enjoy things in life that will bring real happiness. "If you enjoy music there isn't less music in the world, there is more. Those things that are worthwhile multiply with your enjoyment. If you enjoy a good book the pleasure in that book is multiplied. The freedom that comes from such enjoyment and training will not only enable you to secure enjoyment and advancement for yourself, but will enable you to help other people."

The members of the class taking part included: Salutatory, "Citizenship," Leon Schiffer; essay, Isabelle Nills, third honor student; reading of Mothers' Association prize essay, David Spector; valedictory, Marie A. Buchler.

Diplomas were presented to the graduates by Doron Green, president of the school board. A book was also presented to each member of the class, gift from the board of directors. Those receiving diplomas were: Marie A. Buchler, valedictorian; Leon Schiffer, salutatorian; Isabelle Nills, third honor student; Esther E. Lunderburgh, Maude Griffie, Lillian Popkin, Mildred Dyer, Marjorie A. Fagan, M. James Hill, Jr., Herbert A. Pettit, Jr., Sydney Singer, David L. Spector, Rens W. Swan, Anna Asta, Katherine Baur, Joseph Britton, Mildred M. Crudo, Josephine DiLisio, Margaret T. Fox, George F. Herrman, Jr., Mary E. McAuley, Isabelle M. Nills, Gertrude Ringold, Mildred Schell, Geneva Silber, Alice Smith, Albert D. Tentludd, Dorothy E. Unruh, Edith Wharty, Jean E. Wright, Edward W. Gaffney, Maria Hart, Ralph Narcisi, Raymond N. Pieo.

Miss Buchler, valedictorian, was likewise presented with the Grundy medal, one of which is presented annually to the student having the highest average for the four-year course. Other prizes presented included: Gifts from Fathers' Association—A watch to that girl of the senior class having highest average during senior year, awarded to Marie Buchler; a watch to that boy of the senior class having highest average during senior year, awarded to Leon Schiffer; a prize of $5 awarded to that member of commercial course having highest general average of four year course.

ECONOMY IN GOVERNMENT

The depression has made every body tax-conscious and a presidential year, which among other things will decide which congressmen shall return to Washington, has made congress highly sensitive to public opinion. These two, combined with a huge Federal deficit, make the present propitious for a concerted attack on the high cost of government and its burdensome, burdensome taxation.

Former Senator Wadsworth remarked the other day that "for the first time in a long period the country is becoming tax-conscious," and observed that it was a wholesome and encouraging sign when citizens generally become aroused to the necessity of putting a curb on the mounting tax-bill—Federal, state and municipal—which is itself evidence of governmental extravagance and waste.

The American Taxpayers' League has been reorganized for the purpose, according to its organizers, of leading the taxpayers' fight for a return to normalcy in taxation. Such a league can render useful service to either the taxpayers or the politicians who control it. May this league be for the taxpayers first, last and always. Political preferment awaits one who can successfully direct an honest fight for governmental economy.

Washington must face the facts. A committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce has announced, after a survey, that the country cannot support a tax program adequate to balance the badly unbalanced budget, which leaves only one alternative. Deflation in government costs must come this year. The good old days when the government could spend like a drunken sailor and still have a surplus in the treasury are no more.

THE HUMAN ALCHEMY

The life of every man is the latest link in an unbroken chain of immeasurable extent and variety. Into his inheritance are gathered the contributions of the ages, to form the unique identity which is the individual. Appetites and aptitudes are his birthright—the qualities which mark him from birth as different in powers and possibilities from his fellows. Within them lies the life which demands growth and progress throughout his brief share in this world's story.

This inborn life takes direction and determination according to the native endowment of every man. But another power is equally at work, molding and moderating from without. This is experience, with all its necessities and opportunities, pressing in constantly to shape the individual by the force of circumstances.

Between these two forces man holds a proud privilege of choice—choice among the motives within him and choice among the elements around him. No human life lacks entirely the saving dignity of such freedom. By means of it a mystic alchemy is accomplished, whereby character is made. This is the new thing which is man's own creation out of the stuff that is in him and without him. It may be gold or base metal, but it is the man's own making. It is himself, not as he was born nor as destiny has formed him, but as he has shaped his own life within the bounds of destiny.

SYNOPSIS

The Mexican peons, grown tired of Paco Morales' oppression, await the word from "El Coyote," their masked protector, to overthrow him. Morales has enlisted the aid of the U. S. Cavalry to capture the notorious bandit, Ted Radcliffe, a young American, learns that Morales was responsible for his late father's ruin. Bob Harkness, Ted's friend, urges him not to make an enemy of Morales, as he has other plans. Ted is enamored of Morales' beautiful niece, Adela. At a fiesta, Adela, sensing the hatred of Jito, Morales' ward, for Ted, exacts a promise from Ted never to fight with him. Morales informs Bob that his men will join in the search for "El Coyote" and that Jito has dedicated himself to kill the bandit. Adela tells Ted he must not let his lack of wealth keep him from love. Bob receives a note and leaves the merry-making. Shortly after, news is received that Jito's vaqueros are raiding the village. Adela goes to the village with Ted and Morales, and lashes a vaquero insulting a girl. She calls "El Coyote's" vengeance upon Jito. Just as Jito's vaquero is about to flog a farmer who refused to give up his land, a shot rings out and the vaquero drops. El Coyote's men disarm the vaqueros and Morales is informed his rule is over.

CHAPTER XXIII

Stepping directly before Adela, the masked man's sombrero swept the ground. "Go in peace, señorita," he said. "The peon in his hut remembers Dona Adela in his prayers."

Turning again to the vaqueros he pointed toward the village. "El Coyote bids me tell you for this one time to go. Next time it will be a different tale. Your horses and guns stay here."

Jito shrugged his great shoulders. Deliberately he rolled a cigarette, then walked over to the old rancher, still bound to the door, and pulling out his knife severed the bonds. He turned.

"Tonight is yours, señor," he said indifferently. "Tomorrow is yet another day. And sometime when your coyote leader wishes to settle all disputes hand to hand or knife to knife with Jito—" He raised the heavy knife aloft.

A blue blaze of light burst from out of the darkness and an automatic barked. The blade of Jito's knife leaped upward, then fell at his feet with a dull tinkle of broken steel. Only the handle remained in the great vaquero's hand.

"Now by the blood of all the saints," Jito marveled. "El Coyote shoots straight."

It was a silent group that returned to the hacienda. Music still played within the patio, but the grounds were deserted. The people had fled. Don Bob sat smoking beside the fountain, and to him Morales told the brief tale of their past hour. Then again silence fell.

The little lanterns were swinging in the night wind that blew fitfully from the desert, and a few stars hung low over the hills. For a time Adela stood watching them, until at last Morales touched her arm.

"Go, my dear. You are tired."

She turned and smiled a little weary smile. "Until tomorrow," she said, and left them.

Morales watched her pass up the stairs. "Only the very young know how to suffer," he sighed, and turned toward his guests. "It is yet too early for bed. Let us join Jito in the smoking-room. We will all be the better for a little brandy and a cigar." He, too, seemed worn, and his eyes weary, but he smiled that courteous smile of his, and walked toward the outer room.

Jito, enveloped in cigar smoke, curled in a corner. As the three sank into the deep leather chairs, Morales said: "Gentlemen, there is no adequate way of apologizing for this so painful episode of tonight. Tomorrow I shall want to know from you, Jito, why it was allowed. No, not tonight, tomorrow. Tonight I am cañado—tired of the stupidity of you, herdsmen. Personally I have not the slightest care what they do, but they must not molest Adela or my guests."

"They have killed Arturo, señor."

He poured out another brandy. "And now let us talk of more pleasant things, such as—" He waved a hand toward Radcliffe. "I am told that tomorrow Adela will take you out to the Spring of the Saints. It is a very beautiful spot. A good fifteen miles from here, but you are a natural horseman. It will be child's play."

"Who attends them?" asked Jito suddenly from his corner.

Morales looked sharply up. "No one. You know Adela will not have servants on her rides."

But Jito had risen. "I will not have her going unattended. It is—"

"It is what?" Ted asked quietly, but a flush had crept to his face.

For a moment the two men stood at gaze, while Jito seemed to consider his reply.

For one thing, it is not safe. My uncle knows that. None of the foot-hill country is safe."

Again Morales raised his hand. "With ten servants or with twenty, would it be any safer? You know it would not."

But Jito only answered stubbornly: "You should not let her go. You should forbid it."

With a faintly amused air the old Spaniard answered: "I should forbid it. Who forbids Adela to do as she likes? Suppose you forbid it, Jito, my child."

Jito walked the length of the room. "I shall tomorrow. You shall see."

"I shall see once more your great capacity for making a fool of yourself."

He turned with the same look of amusement to the others. "This thing called love, señores, it does not make for rational action. It is to some men as strong drink. It makes my good Jito here act even like a smaller child than God himself made him."

A sudden noise in the doorway drew his attention. A tall vaquero

TEAMWORK COUNTS IN AQUINAS DEFEAT

By T. M. Juno

The Hibernians basketball five took the Croydon Aquinas Club into camp last night on the locals floor by the score of 50-30. The game was a one-sided affair from the start. In the preliminary game the A. O. H. Reserves conquered the Croydon Reserves, 29-25.

Passing and teamwork were the main factors in the "Hiboes'" triumph. The points of the games were well-divided and every player had his share of tries to loop field goals into the net.

The visitors missed many opportunities to score from under the net and did too much wild passing to gain any headway against the Hib. Wankle and Bahr played the best game for the losers.

After the A. O. H. Reserves had piled up a commanding lead against the Croydon Reserves they fell down on the job and allowed the visiting club to creep up their score to within three of the winners' total. The game was uninteresting from the start.

"Eddie" Connors' defensive playing stood out in the Reserves' victory. It was principally through Connors' work that the visitors' score was kept low in the first half of the game. Ennis led the scoring with ten points.

NEWS BRIEFS

HUNT GIRL'S SLAYER

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—The greatest man-hunt in criminal haunts in this city was under way today. Every available policeman in the department was thrown into the search for the maniac who snuffed out the life of dark-eyed Dorothy Lutz, then carried her battered body over roof-tops and hid it in a vacant house.

At 12:30 a. m. today an order for police to go into every vacant house, every alley, hide-away and every hang-out of vagrants was issued by Superintendent Joseph LeStrange. "Even if they have to play in suspects by the score, we want to question everyone to whom the least suspicion is attached," he said.

A dark skinned white man or a light skinned negro became an important clue in the man hunt today. He was said to have been seen talking to the murdered child shortly before she disappeared. He is said to have a mole just below the right eye.

BECHTEL'S INQUEST

Philadelphia, Feb. 10.—An inquest into the death of Norman Bechtel, young Mennonite church worker, whose stabbed and mutilated body was found January 20th, will be held a week from today. Lieut. Frank A. Chaplinsky and several detectives who grilled two suspects in Norristown yesterday, announced they had received information which "may or may not be of value."

The suspects, James Crawford, 31, and Rudy Hudson, 25, both of this city, are said to have admitted being in the vicinity of 32nd and Pearl streets, where Bechtel's blood-stained automobile was found the morning after he was stabbed to death.

CHILD MURDERED

New York City, Feb. 10.—A postcard on which a ghoulish killer revealed the murder of a 13 year old school girl regarded as a model child in her neighborhood, today was the only clue to the slayer of pretty Maria Rosales, found dead by police in an untenanted apartment house in the upper part of the city. Her head was crushed with a gas stove burner to which a lead pipe was attached. Her face was brutally scratched. Her body, scantily clad, was found in a bath tub partially filled with water. Examination showed the little girl had been mistreated before meeting her horrible death. Already aroused by the recent murder of a 5 year old girl at Brooklyn, the entire city was thrown into a state of excitement by the slaying. A heavy police guard was needed to stay the crowd in front of the girl's house.

Commissioners Aid Boy Scout Movement

The new Board of County Commissioners, comprising John S. Roberts, Jr., Howard Refsnyder and Clarence E. Brown, are continuing the helpful assistance rendered to the Boy Scout program in Bucks county by their predecessors through the passing of a motion on Monday permitting the use of an old storage room in the Court House basement for the meetings of the Doylestown Seascout Ship "The Welcome" for their weekly meetings.

Through an arrangement of the crowded storage area in the basement, enough space was made possible, by Court House Custodian Harvey Leatheman, for the meetings of "The Welcome" under Seascout Skipper Robert Sergeant and Chairman of the Ship Committee Theodore Sterling. The Ship is serving boys from Doylestown, Chalfont, Naves Corner and Buckingham.

Clerk of the Commissioners, in a letter to the Scout Executive, stated: "We are making space available to your older boys, 16 to 18 years, knowing that there will not be any damage to county property through the boys having had Boy Scout training. It is a pleasure for us to further your character building and citizenship training program."

budget. A one per cent sales tax would produce upwards of $600,000,000.

Since income taxes will provide not more than a fourth of the revenue, it is probable $800,000,000 must be in sales, excise or stamp taxes.

Fear that a few specific levies—such as the automobile, electricity and gas taxes—would not yield enough revenue prompted reconsideration of a selected sales tax.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills emphasized to the committee in secret session the necessity of balancing the budget to bring government bonds back to par and make them attractive to investors. He estimated $1,300,000,000 is in safety deposit boxes and in hiding.

The Federal budget for the fiscal year ending next June 30, originally estimated at $2,100,000,000, is now being estimated at from $2,400,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 by congressional fiscal experts.

Jefferson county has no county prison, and, therefore, receives no rating, but each of the other counties is covered in the summary, with two institutions for Allegheny county.

In addition to the two which are in the 800 class, six are in the 700 group, five in the 600 group, fifteen in the 500 group, twenty-two in the 400 group, twelve in the 300 group, and five in the 200 class.

Arrest Trio Accused Of Stealing Chickens

I took them back to Hinkle and he asked me how many we got and I said two. Then he told us to go back and get some more, saying that he wanted twenty. We went back a couple of times until we had twelve chickens.

"Then I went home after taking the chickens to Hinkle. The next morning I went to a foundry at Haboro to try and get a job. I did not get work so went back to Hinkles. On the way back I saw Constable Weiss walking down the road following the footmarks that we had left the night before.

"I put the chickens in a bag and placed them in the rear of a car that we had borrowed from a garage. Nobody would go along with me so I took the chickens and drove to a spot near Bethayres where I hid them in a woods. I took the car back to the garage and there I met Constable Weiss.

"About two weeks before Christmas John Hinkle came to my house and wanted me to go out and steal chickens with him. I refused, but the next day I went to his house and there I saw a lot of chickens in his cellar. I asked him if he got the chickens at Yerkes and he said 'yes.' He told me that he got about forty-five chickens."

McConnell signed the statement that he gave to the State Police at the Doylestown sub-station. Today, Hinkle and his son will be questioned. Police say that for some time Hinkle has been looked upon with suspicion in various chicken theft investigations in the Warminster section.

The arrest of the Warminster trio terminates another of a long list of chicken thefts that are being investigated in various sections of Bucks County by the State Police of the Doylestown sub-station. Sergeant Davis and his detail of officers have been doing excellent work, and following that up, no time has been lost in prosecuting the offenders and sending them to prison.

RUBBER HEELS

Lincoln's Birthday! Glancing through his crowded calendar, Mr. Steele noted the red-letter day.

Then he remembered — Lincoln's Birthday was his mother's birthday, too. Back home it would be a family event. He mused. Business cares and the office noises faded. He seemed to hear familiar voices prompting "Home — come home!"

Suddenly his secretary spoke. The day-dream shattered. "Will you call Mr. Foster about the week-end conference?" Mr. Steele came back to earth abruptly.

"Call? Week-end?" he queried. "That's just the idea!" He reached for his telephone. "Give me Buffalo—Cleveland 9801—Hello, Mother, I'm coming home for your birthday . . . Yes, I'm busy, but business can wait!"
